

Rules

- Two to six people can play
- Deal out the cards
- Each player holds their cards so that others can not see them but in a stack so that they can only see their top card.
- The player who starts chooses one piece of information from their top card.
- The other players read out the same piece of information from their top card.
- The player with the best (most, highest . . . etc) card wins and gains all those top cards from the other players and places them at the bottom of their own stack.
- That winner starts the next round.